Skidding machinery provides several advantages over export packing when the conditions are right:

- Provides stability on irregular-shaped items that do not have a flat bottom.
- Creates a buffer zone around the perimeter of the item being shipped to prevent damage to exterior surfaces.
- Lashing points on large machinery can be easily lashed to for securing cargo without sides and ends of an enclosed crate.
- Minimizes the (LxWxH) of the item being shipped as compared to adding a box cap.
- Facilitates access to lifting points directly connecting to the top of the machinery.
